

Robin Holt

Robin took his PhD at the London School of Economics, and has worked in legal practice as well taking posts in politics and then management departments within a number of UK universities. His work investigates abiding questions surrounding the phenomena of knowledge and innovation in business life. He also has an active interest in the philosophy of social science and research methods. He is published in a number of journals including Organization Studies, Human Relations and Research Policy, has co-edited the recently published Sage Dictionary of Qualitative Management Research and is currently co-authoring a book with Robert Chia called Strategy without Design to be published by Cambridge University Press in 2009.